The title was amended so as to read "a bill to authin and invite separate proposals for the construction of a railroad from the valley of the Mississippi to the Pacific ocon upon three separate routes;" and then The Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a message from the President of the United States, transmitting, with ac-companying papers, a report in compliance with the re-quirements of the eighteenth section of an act to regulate the diplomatic and consular systems of the United States; which was laid on the table and ordered to be printed. Also, a letter from the Secretary of State, transmitting for the year ending June 30, 1860, reported yesterday from the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union with sundry amendments.

The first amendment was stated to be the recommenda-tion of the committee that the entire section making ap-propriations for the salaries of the savoys extraordinary, ministers, and commissioners of the United States at for-eign countries be stricken out, and the following inserted:

For salaries of envoys extraordinary, ministers, and commis-somers of the United States at Great British, France, Bassia, Spain, Ipcail, Mexico, thina, Feru, and Nicaragus, $105,000.

The question being put, the amendment was rejected. The second amendment, appropriating $3,375 for the salary of the minister resident at Japan, from the 19th January, 1859, to the 30th June next, and $7,500 for the salary of the minister resident at Japan, was agreed to. The third amendment, reducing the appropriation for defraying the expenses of the commission to run and mark the boundary line between the United States and the British possessions, bounding on Washington Terri-tory, from $100,000 to $71,000, was agreed to. Mr. STANTON, of Ohio, then moved that the vote by which the first amendment was rejected be reconsidered; pending which—

The question then recurred upon the motion that the following section be stricken out:

"To enable the President of the United States to curry into effect the act of Congress of third March, eighteen bundred and mineteen, and any subsequent acts now in force for the suppression of the slave trade, seventy five thousand dediars. Provided, That is much if said appropriation as may be required to pay expunses already incurred may be used from and after the passage of this act." e bill was then read the third time and rejected—

Mr. BRANCH, of North Carolina, moved that the vote by which the bill was rejected be reconsidered, with the view of securing some arrangement by which the bill might be sayed.

Mr. LETCHER, of Virginia, hoped gentlemen on the other side of the House who desired to make a new bill would give the Committee of Ways and Mcans Instructions to guide them in their future action; otherwise it was utterly impossible for the Committee of Ways and Means to arrive at any conclusion in regard to the wishes of the body. If gentlemen wished to strike out certain missions, or certain salaries, let them introduce a resolu-tion and distinctly state what shape they desired the bill to assume when it comes back from the Committee of Ways and Means again. He could hardly apprehend that they desired to keep the Committee of Ways and Means desired to keep the Committee of Ways and Means n utter ignorance of the views of the majority of the House, and leave them to find them out for themselves. Mr. NICHOLS, of Ohio, inquired who had the power in the House, and who was responsible for carrying out the President's recommendation.

Mr. LETCHER replied that, so far as that was concerned, he thought it would puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to tell who had the power. [Laughter.] He understood there was an administration majority, but so far as Lecompton or this bill was concerned he had ascertained that there was not an administration majority; so that there must be some sort of an opposition majority. The session was drawing to a close, and they had to pass these appropriation bills or Congress would be reassembled at an early day. If that extra session was to be avoided, it was necessary for them to confer was to be avoided, it was necessary for them to confer with each other and understand what was the real desire with each other and understand what was the real desire of the majority. He had no interest in the matter; there was nobody from his district on a foreign mission or consulship; but he thought there was a necessity for acting in some satisfactory way. If the bills were to be defeated, the result would be that, by the day the session expired, government would be left without the necessary appropriations.

Mr. GIDDINGS, of Ohio, said it was necessary for him Mr. GIDDINGS, of Ohlo, said it was necessary to the before he would vote for the bill, to know whether the Committee of Ways and Means intended to report a bill appropriating thirty millions of dollars for the purchase of Cuba. If so, he wished to stop the administration

Mr. LETCHER replied that it was the Committee on Mr. LETCHER replied that it was the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and not the Committee of Ways and Means, that had Cuba in charge. If the Committee on Foreign Affairs introduced a bill, and it was passed by the House, the gentleman himself would know that the Committee of Ways and Means would be compelled to conform their action to the expressed will of the House.

Mr. STANTON, of Ohio, stated that, if he understood

Mr. STANIUN, or Onio, stated that, if he understood the rules aright, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Braxen] could not accomplish his object by a reconsider-ation of the vote rejecting the bill. It could only be reached by a new bill. There were several missions that they believed totally unnecessary, and there would be no vote for the bill if there was a provision in it that they did not approve. They held that if bills exceptionable to them were to be reconstituted. them were to be passed they must be passed by the friends of the administration.

Mr. PHELPS, of Missouri, said that the motions of these gentionen had been cut off by the action of the committee. He saw no course but to reconsider the

Mr. BRANCH, of North Carolina, felt that there was a responsibility testing upon the House, and upon himsen, as a jet ber of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, that this uith should not be perpetited to full. If the mestion to reconsider should like over till to-morrow, he would call it up, and in the mean time some satisfactory ariangement neight be made.

Mr. BARKSDALE, of Mississippi, was of the opinion that, if the Committee of Ways and Means should report another bill leaving out Persia, and the clause for carrying into effect the contract made by the President with the Committee in Section, it would pass. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOPKINS, of Virginia, proposed that the motion be reconsidered, with the understanding that they should have a distinct vote by year and mays upon the propositions in dispute.

Mr. HOWARD, of Michigan, voted with the Commit to of Vays and Means on reporting this bill | He wished to see it passed, but yet he had voted against it, because.

although the decision of the Speaker was entirely right upon the parliamentary question, yet the facts reported to him were distinctly different. He wanted his friends to have a vote upon their motions to strike out. He would vote against every one of them himself, and then ould vote for the bill

The SPEAKER stated that there had been no vote taken upon the proposition to reconsider the vote by which the bill was engrossed, and it was entirely competent to reconsider the vote rejecting the bill, to reconsider its engrossment, and then it would be before the House for inconsider the vote rejecting the full, to reconsider its engrossment, and then it would be before the House for amendment.

Mr. CRAWFORD, of Georgia, speaking for himself, said he was ready to take his full share of responsibility for rejecting the bill. There was a shifting majority in favor of different sections. He had no doubt that the portion with whom he acted was the strongest, and would control more votes than any other, and no arrangement could be made by which the bill could be passed, unless their wishes in reference to the contract made with the Colonization Society were met. They desired that portion incorporated in a separate and distinct bill. They voted against the bill for the purpose of recording their opposition to a construction of the act of 1819, so as to provide for the education of returned Africans. Some of the tariff men he supposed would vote for no appropriation at all until the tariff had been raised. No arrangement could be made by which his vote could be secured, unless his wishes were accomplished.

After a brief colloquy between Messra SMITH, of Virginia, and CRAWFORD, of Georgia, the former contending that there was not a word in the chause in reference to the education of these negroes, and the latter insisting that, although it was not in the section, they could not escape the issue, because they were sufficiently informed of the fact by the language of the contract which had been made by the President with the Colonization Society.

Mr. PHELPS, of Missouri, moved to amend the bill—not that he should vote for any of them, but for the purpose of affording gentlemen an opportunity to vote upon each of them separately—by striking out the missions to Prussia, Switzerland, Rome, and Buenos Ayres.

OBITUARY.

It is a familiar remark that "in the midst of his we are in death."
but we scarcely appreciate its truth till some friend in full health is struck down by our side. It is then we are appalled, and realize

"God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform." His wonders to perform."

Although the dread King of Terrors is always invisible, yet in cases of protracted illness we feel that he is howering around, and are prepared for the catastrophe. It is far otherwise when the fatal blow falls subdenly in the midst of a cheerful circle. Such was the case in the unexpected death of Mrs. 1048/RT 182ALE, as it occurred in this city on Honday evening last.

Mrs. Baane had been in her accustomed good health and Pooyant midst, with no apparent sixtness, until within a few hours of her spirit, with no apparent vickness, until within a few hours of het death. A slight illness towards night caused no serious alarm to her self or family circle till near nine o'clock, when the unerring arrow was sped, like a shock of lightning in a cloudless day, and she expired suddenly, surrounded by her domestic circle, and those whom in life she had loved so well, and who were so much devoted to her in life and in death.

The sad itidings spread on the wings of the win I through the community, and her friends could scarcely believe the traits; and we can now scarcely realize that one who appared to be in the meridian of the health, and usefulness, has passed away forever from this world.

Mrs. Bears was no ordinary woman. She possessed the exalted characteristics of her sex in an emisent degree. She was a devoted of the could realize a major thought sider a thirthy friend a result of the could realize a side of the could be compared to the cou wife, a fond mother, an affectionate sister, a faithful friend, a good wife, a food mother, an affectionals sieter, a faithful friend, a good neighbor, and an unpretending Christian. She had neither false prido nor affected condescension, and was equally just to all classes. The domestic, kindred, and social elements were so well tempered and mingled, and so constantly guided by practical common sense as a struct the love, respect, and confidence of those wis a strong sign and most familiar. She was cheerful and leggly in dispubition, always aympathating with the price and confidence from the property of the same of the same was proposed by the hospitable hours.

But Mrs. Bears is no more. No more in the boson of her family, dispensing love, number, cheerfulness, and unceasing attention to the domestic circle; in more in the vicinity, doing kind offices to leggic bors; no more in the social circle, giving control and in agreement to
